CHARLOTTE, NC-- Rock Against Cancer is continuing its mission to make music part of the cure for children battling cancer. The Levine Children's Hospital at Carolinas Medical Center "School of Rock" program will receive a second round of funding on April 27, 2009 at 11:00am in the (insert place). Rock Against Cancer founder, Dr. Lisa White, will present a check in the amount of $20,000 to continue the music therapy for children and teens hospitalized during cancer treatment. In addition there will be a live demonstration of a group music therapy session. The "School of Rock" provides a Board Certified Music Therapist to work with young cancer patients including song writing and recording. Studies show music helps young cancer patients deal with the anxiety, nausea and pain that accompany chemotherapy.

Rock Against Cancer began the "School of Rock" program in 2005 with a grant from the Hot Topic Foundation. Since then, eleven programs have been created in top Children's Oncology Hospitals across the country. In January 2007, this School of Rock program opened at Levine Children's Hospital and Board Certified Music Therapist, Treva Collins was hired part time.

"We are thrilled with the positive impact Treva has had on children with cancer being treated at Levine Children's Hospital. Children write and perform songs with Treva and feel safe in expressing their emotions about being young and having to battle cancer. We are extremely proud of the eleven School of Rock programs operating around the country". -Dr. Lisa White, Founder, Rock Against Cancer
